Writing Focus: Character description

The Minotaur is a fierce beast that is half man, half bull. His eyes are a shining, bright orange and he can smell flesh and bones from miles away. He has dirty, steam horns with sharp, bloody tips from the killing of his prey. Big muscles can be found all over his body. On his wrists are two golden bracelets they are the only clean thing he has. The stench of him is so horrendously bad that one could become dizzy from it. Loudly the Minotaur stomps around the labyrinth making the ground shake and the bricks shed dust. This aggressive beast is 2 metres tall with a vicious growl. His growl is as loud as a lions roar and echos loudly across the maze. Cruelly, it kills every living thing it sees up and eats it. Since no one ever dared to go in the maze whatever he got his hands on was fine. He had such a scraggy neck was as rough as bark on trees. His hooves are rock solid that even a diamond couldn't break them. This creature has yellow, dirty teeth with bloody red stains on them. Although he doesn't get much of them, human beings are his favourite snack.
