LO: To write a character profile

The old, wrinkle-faced Ebenezer Scroodge had an enormous, pointed nose and ~~mean~~, cold, grey eyes watching over you with disgust. Frowns, frustrated faces and forever ongoing soul-less looks was all you saw when you looked at him in ~~up~~ the eye, even if you stared for years. Scroodge was a dark, gloomy, dull man. Never, a single smile appeared on his miserable grumpy face. If you made a joke he ~~would~~ walked away, if you smiled at him he would grow harder and even if you did the kindest thing in the world for him he would mumble very grumpily "Thank you". The cold within him froze his old features, nipped his giant nose, made his eyes red, his lips ~~blue~~ blue and he spoke out shrewdly in his grating voice.

His dark greedy personality sends shivers down people's backs when they see him and are so fearful of him that they run away. Stomping around town, Scroodge hates everyone so tries to ignore them all, anyone who happily, joyfully and merrily said "Merry Christmas!" he answered grumpily, rudely and unexpectedly to the person "BAHUMBUB!" so he made children cry then stomped off even angrier than before. He was disgustingly mean by praising the ~~hard-working~~ horrid workhouse and hating the poor, not helping them at all. He hated Christmas! Obviously! Scroodge was a banker and an unscrupulous moneylender, working at a counting house.

☺ This is an outstanding character description Amelia! Supply
